

Do you have a bossy child at home or a child obsessed with control? Professionals know that children become controlling when they are afraid. Parents who don't know this spend all their energy fighting for control and are left feeling frustrated, angry and confused. Baby Owl Lost Her Whoo teaches children WHY they need to let go of control. When left to manage on her own, Baby Owl freezes in the cold, eats only sweets and forgets to brush her beak! One of eight children's books designed to teach concepts developed by Dr. Karyn Purvis, this story cleverly teaches children that parents are indeed in charge. When children know a safe loving adult is in charge, they can let go of control and spend their time laughing, playing and exploring. Proceeds from the sale of this book benefit the Institute of Child Development at TCU and HALO Project. The other seven books are coming soon!
