

Diving In invites the reader to journey along with nine people who are given this chance as they participate in a life-alternating workshop combined with a diving expedition in the breathtaking, azure waters of Indonesia. Over six days, they are challenged by their teacher to closely examine the how and why of the lives they've made for themselves. The workshop sessions are interspersed with scuba diving some of the most spectacular coral reefs in the world. Mark Brodnarczuk draws upon the metaphor of scuba diving to present his unique principles of below-the-surface discovery, by combining post Jungian psychology with the Enneagram. He offers his readers manageable formulas for creating healthy, growth-oriented relationships; for enhancing creativity and effectiveness; for navigating a mid-life crisis; and for surmounting even the most robust personal problems.
