Desperate, Iris calls Ming Wei, one of her old friends still living in her hometown, to help her track down the runaway mother. After all, Ming owns Savannah River Investigations, which has been in the news. To her surprise, Ming sends the last person she ever wants to see again! Camden's Call! Former FBI agent and burned-out private investigator Camden La Salle is back in Savannah, and is in need of a job. Apparently, stocking grocery store shelves is beyond his pay grade. Ming Wei has just the right job for him to ease back into his PI role. Happy to get a paycheck and healthcare, Camden discovers that the client he has to deal with is his ex-girlfriend. Now he's mad at Ming for setting him up. At first it's awkward between Camden and Iris, but as things worsen for her two nieces and a baby nephew, the two adults must set aside their differences to keep the children together and try to provide a somewhat normal life for them. But how can anything be normal anymore for Camden and Iris with their entire past catching up to them?
